PREAMBLE

South Africa belongs to South Africans!

South Africa is experiencing a plethora of issues, including but not limited to, lack of social cohesion. Many South Africans remain poor and feel destitute and unsafe within their own country. Moral decay has stripped them of their moral dignity due to injustices, lawlessness and orderless….

The dawn of the political freedom in 1994 provided hope for many South Africans and thus South Africans were of the perception that issues of economic emancipation, eradication of poverty and closing the gaps between black and white people would be a thing of the past. Our hope was inspired by a fact that the liberation movement had the hopes of the motive forces of the revolution at its heart.

The national democratic revolution was correctly communicated as a process of transferring power back to the people. The meaning of power is clearly defined as a political, economic and social power. It is further indicated that the people are those individuals who were previously disadvantaged by the past laws of injustice.

It remains evident that any political organization that is truly committed to transferring power back to the people, its character should be of a leftist, ideologically. Since the dawn of democracy in South Africa, counter revolutionary tendencies have been observed with a grave concern. Strategic sectors of the economy have been privatised which are key in uplifting the standard of living of the people.

- Energy plays a key role in developing the economy of the country and for the livelihoods of the people. Privatising Eskom will deepen poverty and inequality to the natives.

- Communication and logistics remain key for connecting and ensuring services for improving people's lives. Post Bank has been rendered useless for the benefit of the private sector and those who own shares to those companies.

- Transportation is a key sector that allows the movement of goods and people. Ensuring cheaper transportation will improve the lives of people and promote economic development. The privatisation of South African Airways (SAA) will disadvantage the majority of natives. Having working railways will promote economic development of the people. Ports will ensure the country can manage the flow of goods in and out of the country.

LOJ Party is founded mainly on four pillars with subset pillars that will be a driving force to attain the state we envision South Africa to realise. LOJ Party pillars include the following:

1.1 Jesus Christ being the foundation of the party
1.2 Restoration of law
1.3 Restoration of order
1.4 Restoration of justice

Embedded within the LOJ Party pillars are the following sub-pillars:

- No foreign national shall own land in the Republic of South Africa. Citizens, by birth, will have right to own land.
- The land remains the property of the state.
- Expropriation of all land without compensation and transferring ownership to the people under the custodian of the state
- Strengthening our borders and ensure high accountability to everyone entering the borders of South Africa illegally
- Quality education for South African citizens, from pre-primary to tertiary levels.
- Nationalisation of key strategic sectors; energy, transportation, communications and the South African Reserve Bank
- Establishing a state-owned bank to promote economic empowerment of the people
- Place South Africa towards being a developed country in the World
